Get the Affordable Healthcare Ball Rolling

Amazon, J.P. Morgan and Berkshire Hathaway, with 1.1 million employees combined, say they're going to tackle health care costs. One expert dismissed this apparent show of force saying it's been unsuccessfully tried it before and a million employees is relatively small in the scheme of things.

Well, the answer is simple. Let people pay out of their own pockets for care and they'll make decisions that control costs. This is not rocket science. Switch back to real insurance and pay cash for routine and minor care. Go to JointheWedge.com and find a doctor that accepts only cash, check or charge. You can get this affordable healthcare ball rolling the right direction, and encourage others to join you. Jointhewedge.com
