Say Uninsurable Conditions Instead

Three weeks ago, when we were in Washington, D.C. we asked Congress and staffers to change their language. We asked them to stop saying 'pre-existing conditions' and to start saying 'uninsurable conditions.'

The reason these conditions are uninsurable is because people have them before they try to buy insurance. These individuals do not need insurance, they're looking for help to pay the bills for medical conditions they got while uninsured. Those who insist that we insure the uninsurable guarantee unaffordable premiums and usher in universal coverage. Compassion for people with uninsurable conditions should not be allowed to lead us to government-run health care for all.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens' Council for Health Freedom.
