“Scientific Authoritarianism”

Dr. Aaron Kheriaty used to be the director of the Medical Ethics Program at the University of California until he was fired for questioning the ethics of vaccine mandates. He says we're experiencing “a kind of ‘scientific authoritarianism,’” where certain people try to “don a mantle of the all-knowing interpreter of science.”

He calls it “charlatanism” because real scientists don't talk like that. Real scientists doing real science have hypotheses, make conjectures, and argue endlessly. Science is a messy, cumulative process, he says, of many experiments, overturned orthodoxies, and paradigm shifts. Real scientists have intellectual humility, and they don't shut down dissenting voices. Given his description, Dr. Fauci is not a real scientist. Not even close.
