How Inexpensive Could Health Care Be?

Many people are more scared of the hospital bill than of the medical condition they're facing. The reason medical care and coverage costs so much is because there are so many middlemen, so many grubby little fingers in the health care pie. It started with Medicare, and then the HMO, now called the health plan, that was imposed by Congress. Then came government reporting requirements and the unaffordable electronic health record mandate.

Most of the costs would disappear if insurers paid the patients, patients used that money to pay their own bills, charity replaced medical assistance, and no data reporting was required. The prices of today do not have to be the prices of tomorrow. Let's get the middlemen out of health care. Go to JointheWedge.com.
