McCullough Wins $1 Million Lawsuit

The $1 million lawsuit filed against Dr. Peter McCullough by his former employer, the Baylor Scott and White Health system, has been dismissed. The system sued him because his separation agreement required him to not mention the hospital's name in the media. But McCullough says he never mentioned Baylor. Others did.

Dr. McCullough said the ruling “is a strong victory for freedom of speech” and more than anything, he said, the lawsuit “represented a form of intimidation and professional reprisal.” They wanted to hurt his career.

Baylor, the big dog in this fight, had accused Dr. McCullough of “reputational harm.” But given Baylor's choice not to renew his contract after he started speaking out on Covid, and then to sue him to silence him, it seems any reputational harm to Baylor might be well deserved.
