“We Were Wrong.”

More people who once supported lockdowns, vaccine mandates, mask mandates and more are standing up and saying they were wrong. Kevin Hass, a medical student and researcher writes in Newsweek that he staunchly supported everything public health authorities did. But now he writes, “I was wrong. We in the scientific community were wrong. And it cost lives” — “thousands, if not millions of preventable deaths.”

He says public health agencies misled the public and their policies from school closures to mask mandates to vaccines were all “scientific mistakes at the time, not in hindsight.” He and other public health officials pushed policies based on their own preferences, not on the people they serve. It’s an amazing admission. Take the time to read it.

“It’s Time for the Scientific Community to Admit We Were Wrong About COVID and It Cost Lives | Opinion,” Kevin Bass, MS MD/PhD Student, Medical School, Newsweek, January 31, 2023: <http://bit.ly/3YU6a6Z>
