The “Fake” FDA Approval of Pfizer Vaccine

The FDA has approved Pfizer’s Covid-19 injection. This may be an official approval of the vaccine called “Comirnaty,” but it is not a declaration of safety or effectiveness. The FDA, in its approval letter, requires Pfizer to conduct 13 studies as injections continue, including on effectiveness, use in veterans, use in young people, fetal vaccine exposure during pregnancy, and “evaluation of myocarditis and pericarditis following administration of” the drug.

The FDA is very concerned about heart inflammation, including its impact long-term. Some studies don’t end until 2027. The benefits and harms of this genetic injection are not fully evaluated. Individuals should never be forced to give up the right of informed consent.
