Doctor Only Accepts New (Unvaccinated) Patients

Those who refuse to be injected face shaming, shunning, and denial of services. Perhaps to pressure parents, Mayor de Blasio in New York City hints at forbidding un-injected children from entering businesses. Los Angeles is requiring proof of vaccination to travel freely in the public square. No proof, no privilege.

Some hospitals are refusing to treat the unvaccinated and firing doctors who want to save their patients. ENT physician Mary Talley Bowden was stripped of hospital privileges because she won't get the shot and she ordered ivermectin to try to save a patient. As she says, this is "pure evil." In response, her Houston-based practice is taking a stand for patients who can't find treatment elsewhere. She will now only accept new patients who are unvaccinated.
