$1 Million to Build Tool for Assessing “Misinformation” Narratives

In October 2022, the CDC asked for applications to develop “a public health tool to predict the virality of vaccine misinformation narratives.” One million dollars of grant funding is available. They want to create a predictive model that identifies new misinformation narratives that would be shared widely and impact the public’s confidence in vaccines.

In other words, the CDC is spending taxpayer dollars to try to make it easier for them to counter messages that urge vaccination choice or caution. Are they worried about the decline of childhood vaccinations since the public discovered the ineffectiveness and dangers of the Covid shot, or are they preparing to shut down all future debate on new vaccines? Stay tuned.
