Woke Ideologies Infiltrate the Exam Room

Critical Race Theory has infiltrated the health care system. University of Minnesota medical students recited an oath, committing themselves to uprooting the perpetuation of structural violence in the health care system. They recognized inequities and traumas rooted in white supremacy. This woke ideology doesn't belong in the exam room.

Some woke state legislators are pushing for laws that address so-called health disparities and racial inequities, and so-called "social determinants of health." A new Minnesota health care law includes the words "racial equity" and "health equity" 17 times each. When you hear the words health disparities, realize this is Critical Race Theory at work and it's a threat to your freedom.
