Why Are All These People Dying?

Have Covid vaccines caused excess mortality? In a video, Edward Dowd, former managing director at Blackrock Investments, says the data in the government VAERS database on vaccine injury has been controversial, but now the actuarial data from the second half of 2021 is emerging from life insurance companies.

For example, in January, life insurer OneAmerica reported non-Covid death rates up 40% higher than before the pandemic, primarily in people in their working years, ages 18 to 64. OneAmerica's CEO says a rare catastrophe would likely cause only a 10% increase in deaths. The question we need to ask is why are all these people dying?
