Troubling Report on Excess Non-Covid Deaths

A new National Bureau of Economic Research report on non-Covid deaths during the pandemic finds 97,000 more deaths per year from non-Covid causes than in previous years. Causes include hypertension, heart disease, diabetes, obesity, homicides, car accidents, and an alarming increase in drug-induced deaths. Deaths from all causes were up 26 percent for working-age adults while children were essentially unaffected.

The authors say “other data on drug addictions, non-fatal shootings, weight gain, and cancer screenings point to a historic, yet largely unacknowledged, health emergency.”

Federal officials ignore this increase in deaths as they continue to push vaccination.
