Six Health Freedom Questions to Ask Candidates

It’s election season. Here are six questions you can ask candidates for office.

One: What role should government play in health care?

Two: What will you do to restore personalized care to the exam room and hospital bedside?

Three: How will you stop health plans, hospital systems, and government from controlling medical decisions and rationing medical care?

Four: What will you do to make sure my trusted physician can direct my care rather than a hospitalist?

Five: What will you do to restore access to affordable medical indemnity insurance?

Six: When will you introduce a patient privacy bill to protect me from HIPAA’s permissive federal data-sharing rule?

Press for specifics. Don’t accept platitudes.
