Where’s the Apology?

A year ago, the government admitted see-through plastic structures and sanitizing surfaces don’t work against Covid. In January, the CDC admitted masks don’t work, but now some schools are mandating masks for children. On August 15, the White House finally admitted six-foot social distancing doesn’t work, but we knew that. Covid is in the air.

Last year, a former FDA commissioner said, “Nobody knows where it came from.” Social distancing was made up. Two and a half years of suffering for nothing. Now the CDC says everyone vaxed or unvaxed should be treated the same – no more discriminatory behavior or shaming. So, it was all made up.

Where’s the apology? Where’s the public admission that officials are to blame for mental anguish, lost jobs, and a bad economy?
