English Families Sue Gender Transition Facility

As President Biden proposes a rule to force physicians to do gender transition surgeries in violation of physiological facts, moral standards, and freedom of conscience, an estimated one thousand families in England will soon sue a gender transition facility. According to WORLD magazine, the families claim, “the facility misdiagnosed and rushed children into damaging puberty blockers and other invasive treatments.” In short, the facility and its practitioners committed medical malpractice on their children.

This may be more difficult to do in America, according to one medical malpractice attorney, because families would have to prove deviation from the standard of care, which can vary by community.
