Get a Passport, Not a REAL ID

Will you need a REAL ID to get on a plane or into military bases? No. Use your passport, passport card, or other IDs on the list.

Only 10 percent of people in Minnesota and 27 percent in Pennsylvania have chosen a REAL ID. They clearly don’t want to pay the higher cost; they don’t want to dig up every document they have just to prove that they are the American citizens they’ve always been; they don’t trust the DMV to digitize and store these sensitive documents in a database; and they don’t want to submit to a federal ID card just to drive their car.

The federal government expects disaster on October 1st when millions of Americans will likely arrive at the airport with only a state drivers’ license. The Feds might have to lift the federal ID requirement, but if you’re worried, just bring your passport.
