Health Sharing Story from a Member

Health sharing organizations have grown significantly since the Affordable Care Act was enacted. People who are members of health sharing organizations have long been exempt from the Obamacare individual health insurance mandate and its penalties. Here is what a couple wrote about their membership in one of the groups, called Samaritan Ministries.

Brian and Susan said they “always had health insurance with a large deductible to make it affordable” so they never met their deductible and thus paid all their medical bills out of pocket. They write, “This is the first time we can remember getting help paying our medical bills PLUS prayers, notes, and cards of encouragement. Wow! We knew how Samaritan Ministries was supposed to work, but it was exciting to see it work! Praise the Lord! We feel so blessed to be a part of this ministry.”
