What Trump Wants in Health Care

President Trump wants to protect people with pre-existing conditions. We all want these patients protected, but how it's done is important. If he means insurers must insure them, and do so at the same price, that's the wrong way, because that's socialized medicine. As Obamacare proves, that makes coverage unaffordable.

Before Obamacare eliminated affordable insurance, raised premiums and left previously insured people uninsured, many patients with known medical conditions got coverage. Some insurers required a 12-month waiting period. Others charged higher premiums. And 35 states had special coverage programs. Let's protect people with known medical conditions, but not socialize medicine to do it.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens' Council for Health Freedom.
