Pandemic Lockdown vs. Protest Leniency

Last week on our Facebook Live video, I talked about “Pandemic Lockdowns vs. Protest Leniency.” Remember the dire claims of danger if we do not social distance or if we don’t wear masks. Some of you still aren’t able to get into or sing at your church. Some missed weddings and funerals and saying final good-byes to loved ones all because of the supposed need to stand clear of each other.

But then came the protests, with throngs of people – 60,000 in Houston – marching together in the streets, and social distancing mandates seemed to go out the window. Some claimed that the public health risks of not protesting would “greatly exceed the harms of the virus.” So it’s hands off for protestors and hard lockdown for the rest of us? What’s really going on here? Follow us on Facebook to hear more.
