Abortion Word Games

Words can change hearts. They can win political battles. As an example of the word games that are played, I just read an article about using non-physicians to do abortions and discovered a new term: “abortion care.”

The article uses “abortion” and “abortion care” interchangeably. It may be a strategic choice to call the termination of a child’s life “abortion care.” Like other euphemisms, it may be trying to hide the truth because, the fact is, there’s nothing caring about the abortion for the baby or the mother, who must live with her decision, and without her child, forever. So never accept or use the other side’s words. Find your own heart-winning words for battle.
