Army of Debunkers to be Launched Against Vaccine Choice

A well-funded non-profit organization called Public Good Projects, or PGP, has launched a pro-vaccine project called “Stronger.” They will “conscript a vast army” of debunkers who will be trained to “block, hide, and report” so-called vaccine misinformation. The group believes it’s hard for government officials to fight against those who support vaccine choice so their organization will fill the void. It’s raised money from other organizations including the world’s largest biotechnology lobbying group.

The army of debunkers will be alerted to online misinformation and given language to counter-post. But PGP will be battling a far more committed army of moms and dads whose aim in life is to protect their children, including from the harms of forced vaccination.
