Second Lockdown or Sweden?

Some want a second lockdown. Freedom, individual rights, the economy, the rise in suicides, cancers undetected and untreated, and the mental anguish of millions are apparently secondary to stopping the unstoppable virus.

We’ve had five months of emergency declarations, executive orders, masking mandates, social distancing, closed restaurants, shuttered stores, lost jobs, reduced incomes, people dying alone, weddings delayed, grieving short-circuited, church-going prohibited, and at least three trillion dollars in federal spending. Where do individual rights and constitutional freedoms come in?

Lockdown was supposed to be a temporary flattening of the curve, not a permanent shutdown to wait until the virus went away. Meanwhile Sweden, which never went into lockdown, has a thriving economy. Which decision do you support?
