Congress Wants Your Medical Records Linked and Online

No matter what you’re doing, please stop for the next 40 seconds and listen.

The U.S. House appropriations bill would give every man, woman and child a unique patient identification number that would link together each patients’ medical records -- from cradle to grave.

The official name of this number is a Unique Patient Identifier, but it would be a federally-issued National Patient ID. It would not only link together every medical record you have, it would also be the only way you could get access to care. So no card, no care.

Tell your Senator and Congressman to stop the National Patient ID. Tell them not to develop, fund or impose a National Patient ID.

Presented daily by Twila Brase, President, Citizens’ Council for Health Freedom.
