Help Senator Rand Paul Stop the National Patient ID

U.S. Senator Rand Paul needs your immediate support. He’s sent a letter to the Senate appropriations committee asking it not to fund the development of a national patient ID. He says, “the privacy interests of the American people” outweigh any convenience for use of electronic health records.

This ID number he says, “would inevitably be fed into various government data systems,” making patients vulnerable to cyberterrorists and those who wish to blackmail and intimidate them. He urges the committee to oppose using federal tax dollars to develop” a national patient ID.

The U.S. House has already voted to fund its development, so time is short. Tell your Congressman and Senator to stop the National Patient ID.
