Everyone Tested for COVID-19 is Reported to Feds

The federal CARES Act, the third coronavirus bill passed by Congress, requires all COVID-19 testing, whether positive or negative, to be reported. This means your name, your address, and much more is reported not only to the state, but to their federal partners as well. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) has a list of required data that must accompany the test results.

Doctors that refuse to share this information could be fined $500 a day. When a television station in Jackson, Tenn. contacted HHS, officials acknowledged that the reported data goes above and beyond what has historically been requested, but they claim the data is needed for the worst global epidemic in recent history. In short, COVID-19 is expanding federal surveillance on Americans.
