Five Years of Obamacare Broken Promises

Today is the fifth anniversary of the signing of Obamacare into law. Before President Obama gathered with supporters of national health care to sign the bill, Americans had been subjected to lies, a huge bill of language no one read, procedural shenanigans, national media that was essentially absent in action, and claims that the law would be the best thing since sliced bread.

False claims included that we’d be able to keep our coverage and our doctors if we wanted to; the coverage would be affordable; and we’d all be able to shop for coverage as easy as buying a plane ticket on Travelocity. No such thing happened. The law must be repealed.
