Disturbing IRS Story Sent to CCH Freedom

We've received an interesting story. The IRS is demanding one person pay back most of the subsidy he received. But the federal exchange has no record of the income level he submitted which determined the subsidy transferred to the health plan. He thinks the IRS has a different eligibility calculator than the exchange. That's doubtful, but no paper trail is disturbing.

He is perturbed that the exchange promised him a subsidy, the IRS is now coming to take money out of his pocket, but the IRS can't prove he owes the money because there's no paperwork. It's likely a misunderstanding of how the process works, but maybe not. Do you have a story? Share it at myhealthcarestory.com That's myhealthcarestory.com
