No Such Thing as 22 Million

The Congressional Budget Office says repealing Obamacare will increase the uninsured by 22 million. But John Graham writing in Forbes disagrees. He says federal officials mischaracterize health insurance. They call Medicaid “insurance” when it’s actually welfare. They claim that 14 million people with Medicaid will become uninsured, but they are not insured, they are on welfare.

The other 8 million are on Obamacare, and most receive taxpayer subsidies. Thus, these folks don’t have private insurance either. Obamacare is just Medicaid for the middle class on a sliding fee scale. So, the claim of uninsuring 22 million people is a facade. Don’t believe it.
