Democrat Saber-Rattling on Obamacare?

When Judge O'Connor ruled the Affordable Care Act invalid because the mandate in it is unconstitutional, incoming Speaker of the U.S. House, Democrat Nancy Pelosi who was Speaker when it became law in 2010, said that as soon as Democrats take charge of the House, they'll move to intervene in the appeals process of the lawsuit.

Democrats took charge five days ago. Let's see what happens. They may not be able to intervene. The lawsuit involves the executive branch, and the judiciary, not Congress. Unless they can get a law passed, including by the Republican-led Senate, and signed by Republican President Donald Trump, they might only be able to make a lot of noise.
