The Truth About Tort Reform Law

A paper posted on the American Bar Association website discusses the “Five Myths of Medical Malpractice.” The authors say there are two benefits from tort reform law: fewer lawsuits filed and lower payouts. But here’s the surprise: the quality of health care decreased, the number of practicing physicians stayed the same, and the cost of health care services increased. The authors, both attorneys, advise patient-safety initiatives to reduce the frequency and severity of medical mistakes rather than passing tort reform laws.

Yet today’s health care system is fracturing the patient-doctor relationship, limiting time with patients, imposing a convoluted computerized medical record, and focusing on paperwork -- assuring more mistakes and lawsuits, not less.
