Supreme Court Refuses Obamacare Case

Last week, the Supreme Court chose not to accept the Sissel v HHS lawsuit. It was an important Obamacare case because the U.S. Constitution allows Americans to be taxed only by legislation that originates in the U.S. House of Representatives. In this case, the Senate authored the tax language.

To try to meet constitutional muster, the Senate took a tiny 6-page House bill about tax relief for military housing, stripped it of every word except its bill number and inserted Obamacare, a huge bill filled with taxes including the individual mandate, which the court has called a tax. The court missed an opportunity to right a serious constitutional wrong.
