British Baby Alfie Fights for Life

Socialized medicine is not patient- or parent-friendly. Last year British courts claimed the life of little Charlie Gard. This year it’s Alfie Evans, a 20-month old boy with a mystery disease that causes seizures.

British doctors say continuing treatment is unkind and want the courts to let them pull the plug on Alfie. His parents want to take him out of the country for treatment saying he still responds to them.

It’s never good when courts become deciders of life and death and hospitals become prisons that hold children against the will of the parents. But this is socialized medicine, and we Americans should set a course back to health freedom before socialism begins to claim the lives of American children.
