Eighth Anniversary of Obamacare Arrives With No Repeal In Sight

Today is the eighth anniversary of the Un-Affordable Care Act. I’d like to say the Republicans tried to repeal the entire law as they promised, but I can’t. Every so-called repeal attempt was not a repeal. They would have left most of the law intact. Furthermore, they tried to make wage redistribution permanent.

Even the mandate and penalty for going uninsured have not been repealed. The penalty has only been zeroed out, starting next year.

Meanwhile leadership is trying to “stabilize” the Obamacare exchanges with billions of taxpayer dollars redistributed from American pockets to health plan coffers. Most lawmakers never planned to actually repeal the ACA. They just used the promise to get re-elected.
