The True Statistics on Pre-Existing Conditions

Democrat Congressman Frank Pallone says 129 million people have pre-existing conditions. However, 82 million are covered through their employers and millions more by Medicaid. That leaves 4.7 million, according to one study.

But around 226,000 people were enrolled in state programs for people with pre-existing conditions before Obamacare. And only 115,000 people enrolled in the Obamacare program for people with pre-existing conditions. That’s less than 500,000 people.

Americans needs solutions that end the problem of uninsurable conditions. Obamacare only puts the entire cost of caring for people with uninsurable conditions on people who buy their own insurance, making it unaffordable.
