No Wonder Congress Doesn't Care About Repeal

I talked to someone who is insured through the federal government and doesn’t understand the complaints about costs. He’s on the Federal Employees Health Benefit Program, which is mostly taxpayer funded and not accessible to the rest of us. This program is why members of Congress may not feel the pain of Obamacare or care about repealing the law.

First, they have access to 245 plans. Second, their premiums increased on average just 6.2 percent this year while millions of Americans experienced double digit increases. They also have access to plans with $350 deductibles for individuals and couples, and $700 deductibles for families. How’s that compare with your options and costs?
