Why It's Independence Day in the USA

What a great day this is. But it’s not “July 4th.” It’s American Independence Day. Words change minds and engage hearts. If we talk about American Independence Day, it means much more than the mere red, white and blue, picnics and the fireworks we will enjoy today.

Talking about independence and freedom rivets American minds on why this day is so important. Once a year, they are called to remember the 56 signers that pledged their lives and sacred honor to give us a country that is the greatest in the world because it values individual endeavor, rewards integrity and empowers the creative talents of the human mind and spirit. So, Happy Independence Day!
