Against All Enemies, Foreign and Domestic

Seventeen years ago this month, terrorists attacked America. In light of that memory, consider the Oaths of Allegiance made in America.

Members of the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate and immigrants who want to become U.S. citizens must declare that they “will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic.” The president promises to “preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.”

These individuals promise they’ll defend the foundation of American freedom. As foreign and domestic enemies of the U.S. Constitution become more violent and more visible, have you, as an American citizen, taken a personal oath to support and defend the Constitution?
