The Great Physician Exodus

A survey of over 8,000 physicians shows the dire situation that America faces with its doctors. A great exodus is in the works. Both young and old are leaving. Seventeen percent intend to retire in the next three years, which according to The Physicians Foundation means a loss of 130,000 doctors. That averages 2,600 doctors per state.

Since most primary care doctors have 1,200 to 1,900 patients, and some physicians have up to 3,000, millions of their patients in each state could lose at least one of their doctors. Isn’t it time you looked for a physician in The Wedge of Health Freedom? Go to JointheWedge.com
