Will You Be Detained Without Consent?

This is an alert! A proposed rule could empower federal officials to detain Americans traveling around the country by plane, train, bus or boat if they appear ill. If there’s a possibility you have measles, have been exposed to measles or are not vaccinated against measles, you could be forcibly detained for three days even though the government admits measles is not a disease requiring quarantine.

You could be examined, tested and vaccinated without your consent. You could be fined up to $100,000 for resisting and charged with a misdemeanor. Assert your rights of freedom and consent. Find our alert at CCHFreedom.org The deadline to oppose the rule is Friday, October 14. Go to cchfreedom.org
