Obama Plan to Redistribute Didn’t Work

The Obama administration promised to cover health plan losses on the exchange for three years. Funds from insurers with healthier patients would be sent to insurers with sicker patients. But only $362 million came from healthier plans and $2.87 billion was requested by sicker plans. In other words, all sorts of sick people came in under Obamacare and healthy people stayed out.

So the administration said plans with sicker patients would only get 12.6% of their request, causing some plans to leave the exchange. In case you didn’t know, Obama planned to pay the $2.5 billion shortfall out of the U.S. Treasury – until Republicans passed a bill to stop the bailout.
