Real Life Example of Premium Hikes

What do you think when you hear premiums are increasing by 40 or 60 percent? Percentages make it hard to know what’s actually happening. So here’s a real life example. One Minnesota family’s policy is going up 55 percent. That means their premiums will rise from $676 to $1050.

Writing out a check every month for $1050 is much harder than a check for $676. To make it worse, the family’s hospital is no longer in the network even though they were told it was. Well, it is in, but only after they got their first bill did they learn that it’s in-network only for pain management. So, higher prices and less choice, thanks to Obamacare.
