The Exchange Blame Game

Last Thursday, Congress held a hearing called: “PPACA Implementation Failures: Didn’t Know or Didn’t Disclose?” Four contractors testified and blamed the administration. I watched it online and live tweeted the first three hours.

Contractors were given just two weeks to test full integration of the system when they needed months. And HHS told them just 10 days before it went online that they had to eliminate the “anonymous shopping” option, which created a bottleneck when everyone had to sign up before they could look. The contractors say the exchange will get fixed. Tune it tomorrow when HHS Secretary Sebelius is in the hot seat before Congress. Who will she blame? Follow me on twitter if you can’t tune in.
