Should you Register Your Exemption?

If you are exempt from the Obamacare mandate, you could choose not to register your exemption and owe the “uninsured tax” instead. Why might you want to do that?

To enforce Obamacare, the new federal surveillance system will be able to tap into your household income, your family and employment status, your wages, your insurance and citizenship status, your criminal status, your social security number, your address, and the names of everyone in your family and more.

If you’re exempt, but just pay the tax for being uninsured, you may be able to stop some of the data collection. Keeping the government out of the loop might just be worth paying the tax. You decide. You have until tax time 2015.
