The Insured are Skipping Care

According to Families USA, an avid supporter of national health care, 25.2% of adults with individual health coverage went without some medical care because they couldn’t afford the cost. People at lower and middle incomes and with higher deductibles skipped care more than others.

In other words, Obamacare increased coverage but cut care. Unfortunately, Obamacare made insurance and medical care more expensive and is busy dismantling the charity system that many of these people depended on. Because of the support of Families USA and others, there will be fewer people cared for now than before Obamacare. The law must be repealed.
