The Real Reason Healthcare Was Top Election Issue

Health care was the top issue in the midterm elections because Obama and the Democrats passed Obamacare to redistribute American wages and wealth—to health plans. So people with insurance lost it and couldn’t afford the Obamacare-priced premiums. They also lost their doctors and their hospitals. But health plans have grown ever more wealthy.

One commentator said health care was the top issue because Americans have joined Obama’s side on health care. Not so. It was the top issue because Americans were wrongly led to believe that they might lose even more. They weren’t told that the pre-existing condition mandate is the foundation of socialized medicine—which, if imposed using Medicare for all, would be the biggest loss ever.

“Obama’s Health Insurance Overhaul a Winner in Midterms,” Geoff Mulvihill and Ricardo Alonso-Zakduvar, Associated Press, November 7, 2018: https://apnews.com/4e2d29e12ebe4fc7a2e197ff0ed3be9c

“Obamacare was Mainly Aimed at Redistributing Wealth,” Byron York, Washington Examiner, April 2, 2010: https://www.washingtonexaminer.com/obamacare-was-mainly-aimed-at-redistributing-wealth