Eternal Vigilance Still Necessary Under GOP

Now that Mr. Trump is president-elect and Republicans control the U.S. House and U.S. Senate, there’s a sense of relief among conservatives. And while it’s certainly true that Republicans will often act and vote conservatively, it’s also true that they sometimes do the opposite.

For example, Republicans gave us Medicare’s MACRA law, which one writer calls a “complete regulatory capture of medicine.” Yes, it’s the takeover of your doctor. MACRA is a GOP bill. A week before it passed, Obama’s chief economic advisor told the Center for American Progress, which helped to write Obamacare, that the bill would enhance the payment controls of the Affordable Care Act. So there’s relief, but eternal vigilance is still necessary.
