Vote Today Don’t Stay Home

Today is election day. In 2008, millions of Christians did not vote for president. They walked away from deciding who would run the country for the next four years. Whoever wins today’s election will have extraordinary power until the 2016 election. They’ll be able to sign bills that limit or expand your rights to your own religious beliefs, your own money, your child-rearing decisions, and your right to get medical care when you’re 70 years old.

Today is your opportunity to say yes to one presidential candidate and no to the other. Today you also choose who will write state laws. Please don’t stay home. Take a friend. It’s time for everyone to vote. You have until 8:00. Please vote.
