Detroit Shows Money in the Hand Better than a Handout

What has happened in Detroit is a warning to anyone relying on a government handout. That includes anyone dependent on Medicare, Medicaid, the VA or Obamacare. A judge has ruled that Detroit can cut the pension funds owned to city retirees as part of bankruptcy proceedings.

The promise of a lifetime of minimum government payments just vanished. The city could not keep its promise because it has no money to do so. Likewise, if you are dependent on the government for a promise, like Medicare, it would be wise to increase your savings for when and if that promise fails. It’s always better to have money in hand than to depend on a handout.
