Mayo Doctor Says Mission of Healthcare Corrupted

Dr. Victor Montori is a physician and researcher at the Mayo Clinic. With his book called “Why We Revolt,” he wants to start a “patient revolution for careful and kind care.” His book describes what is wrong with industrial healthcare, how it has corrupted its mission and how it has stopped caring.

He says that money has taken over as the industry’s reason for existing, and that “Money has shifted from a resource for patient care to the product of healthcare.” And in the process, health care organizations fail the patients with the most difficult challenges, those with chronic conditions that cause pain and suffering and dysfunction. Thus, the industry fails the very people for which it was created. (Emphasis mine.)
