Is Zuckerberg $45 Billion a Gift?

In this time of gift-giving, is Mark Zuckerberg’s promise of $45 billion a gift? In his Facebook letter he claims future generations may not have to suffer from disease, and thus investments must be tilted to make that a reality. He writes, “Today we spend about 50 times more as a society treating people who are sick than we invest in research so you won't get sick in the first place.”

What kind of research would he suggest in pursuit of ending disease? Would there be genetic manipulation, restrictions on procreation, behavioral modification, penalties for unhealthy lifestyles, restrictions on food options, entertainment and transportation? Think about it. My final overview of his letter is tomorrow.
